

REVISING NOTE

How to submit the revised paper?

Until now, at the level of the Editorial Office, as well as at that of the Peer Reviewers, to whom we have to submit again the paper for re-evaluation, we have too often lost an important time to find out what exactly had been changed during the revision.

Consequently we request from you the following items:

1/ on a separate sheet you write a statement indicating any changes that have been made, separating Referee I and Referee II.

Moreover the author has:

2/ to send to us the first version of the paper, which had been returned to the author for revision, and
3/ the second, consequently the Revised version.

and

4/ to underline in the first version the phrases which have been deleted and are no more presented in the revised version,

5/ to highlight in the revised version the lines which have been added, corresponding to the integration of the critics emitted by the Peer Reviewers.

These remarks apply as well to the text as to the captions of the figures, to the references and the Tables.

We should receive the above in DOUBLE EXAMPLARIES.

The presentation has to be so clear that it is immediately possible to find out what has been changed.

If the authors do not respect this important Revising Note, we simply reject the paper, without any other commentary. We require cooperation and we hope that the authors understand this situation.

Thank you for your comprehension and collaboration. If there remains any question, please contact us;
